

DEPARTMENT EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES

AGRICULTURAL ECONOMICS

The Department of Agricultural Economics for AY 2020, is authorized to hire up to 1 Assistant Lecturer and 3 Lecturers. All positions are non-tenure track positions.

All of these faculty positions require teaching undergraduate courses related to agricultural economics. All non-tenure track positions are subject to budgetary availability, student enrollment needs, programmatic needs, and turnover rates. To apply, please send your curriculum vitae to Dr. Fred Boadu, (f-boadu@tamu.edu) via e-mail or mail to the address on our homepage.

The educational requirements for the positions are: a) have a terminal or Master level degree in Agricultural Economics, or in a related field to the one in which the faculty member will teach, or b) have a Bachelor level degree in Agricultural Economics, or in a related field to the one in which the faculty member will teach, plus either three years of practice in a related field, or special licensure or certification that is supportive of the teaching goals of the program.

If the applicant does not have a terminal degree in Agricultural Economics, they should have either three years of teaching at the college level or three years of professional experience in a related field in which they are teaching, or a combination of the two. (Teaching experience may have been acquired at the graduate assistant level)
